

- A. Named entity recognition could be used by email platforms to scan email addresses and consider whether or not the email was sent by a recognised, trusted organisation/ person/ business, or if it is a known spam account. An example of the code would be, 'for ent in doc.ents:'
- B. Token-based matching could be a useful tool grading numerous essays, as it could confirm that the writer has included the key words/ sentences/ points within the essay.
- C. Using similarities such as [object]. similarity() to decide how similar the patient's symptoms are to predefined illnesses/ diseases.